

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY IN CAIRO

DEPARTMENT OF LAW

FACULTY RECRUITMENT

The American University in Cairo (AUC) Department of Law invites applications from both experienced and entry-level candidates for a full-time faculty position starting Fall 2007. Interested candidates should be willing to teach Comparative Constitutional Law, European Union Law and The European System of Human Rights. Interest in teaching European Private Law, and/or Human Rights Law Research and Writing is a plus. The successful candidate is also expected to supervise graduating student theses and serve on university committees as the need arises. English is the language of instruction

AUC LAW DEPARTMENT

The AUC Law Department was formally established in Fall 2006 and is the first and only of its kind to offer American style legal education in the Arab World. The Department has two graduate programs: The MA Degree Program in International Human Rights Law and the LL.M. Degree Program in International and Comparative Law. The Law Department seeks to offer a space of intellectual rigor and academic excellence where questions of legal reform and development can receive the thoughtful attention they deserve. The successful candidate is expected to offer courses and supervise students in both degree programs. Founded in 1919, AUC's campus is located in Cairo, Egypt with degree programs accredited by the Commission on Higher Education of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools.
