Overview

The aim of this course is to attempt a comparison between Italian and British legal systems about the acknowledgement and delivery of welfare rights from the perspective of both judiciary and administrative authorities.

The first series of seminars is devoted to focusing on the English system with a group of scholars from York School of Law and some Italian scholars as discussants.

A further cycle will be dedicated mainly to analysing the Italian legal system.

Goals

To understand and discuss the different styles and approaches of the Italian and English legal systems to the concept and practise of social rights, also considering related matters such as human rights law, the European free market of services, the role of courts, and kinds of redresses of grievances.

Participants

Phd students in legal studies, the staff of the Department of legal studies, selected lawyers.
